Fit to be a Doctor? is an innovative new careers test developed by The Medic Portal in association with the Royal Society of Medicine in the UK. The test is designed for 14 – 18 year olds considering a career in medicine. It examines both the academic and non-academic skills which medical schools look for when recruiting student doctors. The test is delivered online over 90 minutes using technology supplied by our partners, Pearson VUE, at approved centres in Hong Kong and China.

Every year 90,000 young people apply to study medicine on English-speaking courses in China and thousands more apply to medical schools in the UK and the United States. However, many of these candidates are unsuccessful in gaining a place.

Fit to be a Doctor? is an invaluable tool to help analyse students' individual strengths and to guide them in the areas of personal development where there may be room for improvement.

ASIS is a UK-based education services company, the developers of the British Universities and Secondary Schools Achievements Tests (BUSSATs) and the suites of entry tests, BUSSATs Evaluator tests and a series of career advisory tests. Amber Education is one of the leading education consultancies in Hong Kong, China and London.

The Royal Society of Medicine has a long-established position as a provider of high-quality continuing postgraduate education and learning to the medical profession. The Medic Portal is the definitive resource and training provider for both aspiring medics and those that advise them. Officially partnered with the Royal Society of Medicine, it is the UK's leading platform for those applying to get into Medicine.
